Who is Diane Louise Deocareza and what is her role at Northmore Gordon?

Diane Louise Deocareza works in Audit & Compliance at Northmore Gordon, focusing on Quality Management and Environmental Certificates. In this role, she contributes to ensuring that our energy optimization, carbon advisory, and environmental certificate services meet applicable quality standards and regulatory requirements. Her focus on environmental certificates is particularly relevant given our involvement in project registration, certificate creation and trading, and compliance with scheme-specific evidence and documentation standards across jurisdictions including Australia and Singapore.

What is Diane Louise Deocareza's educational background?

Diane Louise Deocareza holds a Bachelor's degree in Technical Teacher Education, specializing in Food and Service Management (BTTE Major in Food and Service Management), from City College of Angeles. This educational foundation is relevant to her compliance and quality management work at Northmore Gordon, particularly given our involvement in food and beverage sector energy assessments and the operational compliance requirements associated with energy-improvement programmes in that industry.

What work experience does Diane Louise Deocareza have prior to Northmore Gordon?

Diane Louise Deocareza previously worked as a Compliance Auditor at Outsource Excellence and as an Administrative Aide in the Local Government of Angeles City. Her compliance auditor background directly supports her current role in Audit & Compliance at Northmore Gordon, where she applies quality assurance and compliance expertise to ensure that energy optimization projects, environmental certificate submissions, and measurement and verification activities meet scheme requirements and organizational standards across multiple jurisdictions.

What professional expertise does Diane Louise Deocareza bring to Northmore Gordon's environmental certificate services?

As the Audit & Compliance specialist focused on Environmental Certificates, Diane Louise Deocareza applies her compliance auditor background to ensure that our environmental certificate services—including project registration, certificate creation and trading, and compliance with scheme-specific evidence standards—meet regulatory requirements. Environmental certificates require careful documentation of equipment specifications, installation evidence, baseline conditions and measurement procedures. Her role helps ensure that certificate projects across different schemes maintain appropriate audit trails and meet the exact requirements of each governing body, protecting both client eligibility and project integrity.

How does Diane Louise Deocareza's background in food and service management inform her work at Northmore Gordon?

Diane Louise Deocareza's specialized education in Food and Service Management is relevant to her compliance role given our work in the food and beverage sector. Food and beverage operations require careful coordination of energy-related processes including refrigeration, boilers, ovens and compressed air systems, along with compliance with food-safety and operational reliability constraints. Her understanding of this sector supports her ability to assess the operational and compliance requirements of energy projects in food processing facilities, ensuring that quality management and regulatory compliance are maintained throughout implementation and verification.

What professional passion drives Diane Louise Deocareza's work in audit and compliance?

Diane Louise Deocareza is passionate about utilizing her knowledge and experience to inspire and educate others, particularly in the food and service industry. This commitment extends to her compliance role at Northmore Gordon, where she contributes to ensuring that energy and environmental projects are implemented with appropriate quality standards and transparency. By maintaining rigorous audit and compliance processes, she helps clients understand and meet their obligations across energy efficiency schemes, environmental certificate requirements, and operational performance standards.

What does Northmore Gordon's focus on environmental certificates mean in practical terms for compliance?

We provide support for project registration, certificate creation and trading across multiple schemes including Victorian Energy Upgrades, NSW Energy Savings Scheme, and ACCU projects. Compliance in this context requires ensuring that projects meet activity-specific eligibility criteria, establish appropriate baselines and measurement boundaries, maintain required evidence records, and follow method-specific record-keeping guidance. Diane Louise Deocareza's role in this area helps ensure that our clients receive guidance that reflects actual scheme requirements rather than assumptions, and that certificate projects are properly documented from planning through issuance.

How does Diane Louise Deocareza's compliance focus support Northmore Gordon's multi-jurisdiction operations?

We operate in both Australia and Singapore, each with distinct regulatory frameworks for energy efficiency and environmental compliance. Australian jurisdictions include Victoria, New South Wales and broader national schemes such as NGER and the ACCU scheme, while Singapore has separate industrial energy-management obligations. Diane Louise Deocareza's audit and compliance expertise helps ensure that our services and documentation standards reflect the correct requirements for each jurisdiction, protecting client projects and maintaining our quality standards across its operating regions.
