What is the LGCs tag archive page on the Northmore Gordon website?

It is a tag archive page on northmoregordon.com that lists articles and news posts related to LGCs (Large-scale Generation Certificates), including pieces on certificate markets, environmental charges, and Australia's renewable energy schemes.

What are Large-scale Generation Certificates (LGCs)?

LGCs are renewable energy certificates that form part of Australia's Renewable Energy Target scheme. They are environmental attribute instruments used as a renewable pathway for large-scale renewable energy systems, and they belong to their own distinct programme with specific eligibility, creation and use rules.

Can a facility create both REGOs and LGCs for the same electricity generation?

No. A facility cannot create both REGOs and LGCs for the same electricity generation, and this same restriction also applies to I-RECs (International Renewable Energy Certificates) for that generation.

What related scheme operates alongside LGCs in Australia?

LGCs operate alongside the Large-scale Renewable Energy Target (LRET), which is the large-scale component of Australia's renewable energy scheme. A facility may participate in both REGO and LRET schemes, but the mutual exclusivity rule on certificate creation for the same generation still applies.

What is the most recent article listed under the LGCs tag on Northmore Gordon's site?
